What exactly is L3C?

"Your L3C community." What does that mean? It means you’ll be living with and learning from other freshmen who have a diversity of perspectives. They care about the world around them. And they care about becoming the kind of leader that Texas A&M University is known to develop.

But what about...

...the cost? It’s free to participate.

...where I’ll live? Aston Hall, in the Commons on campus.

...my membership in Greek Life? No problem. Just let your Greek organization know about your L3C academic commitment.

...my roommate? You can choose a specific roommate if he or she is part of the L3C program.

...getting academic credit for the program? You will earn credit for the ALED classes, which may apply toward your major.

...being in the program if my major is not in the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences? No problem. The program is open to freshmen in any major at Texas A&M.

...being in the program after my freshman year? We need sophomore mentors who can apply what they have learned. Learn more about this in class.

...being a Regent Scholar while I’m in the program? Regent Scholars will need to be in a learning community based upon their specific college’s requirements.

...finding out if I’ve been accepted into the L3C program? You’ll be notified about acceptance once L3C housing assignments have been made.

...the cost? It’s free to participate.

...where I’ll live? Aston Hall, in the Commons on campus.

...my membership in Greek Life? No problem. Just let your Greek organization know about your L3C academic commitment.

...my roommate? You can choose a specific roommate if he or she is part of the L3C program.

...getting academic credit for the program? You will earn credit for the ALED classes, which may apply toward your major.

...being in the program if my major is not in the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences? No problem. The program is open to freshmen in any major at Texas A&M.

...being in the program after my freshman year? We need sophomore mentors who can apply what they have learned. Learn more about this in class.

...being a Regent Scholar while I’m in the program? Regent Scholars will need to be in a learning community based upon their specific college’s requirements.

...finding out if I’ve been accepted into the L3C program? You’ll be notified about acceptance once L3C housing assignments have been made.

For more information about the Leadership Living Learning Community or to apply for membership, please visit: http://reslife.tamu.edu/housing/llc/l3c.
JOIN A COMMUNITY LIKE NO OTHER

Texas A&M University will challenge you to study and succeed like never before. And because of that, Aggie diplomas command respect worldwide. We accept the challenge to innovate and achieve. But most of all, Aggies are identified by the instinct to lead.

The Leadership Living Learning Community (L3C) at Texas A&M University offers you personal experience, academic excellence, leadership and development. And the best part is that your neighbors in the program are future leaders, too.

WHAT’S INVOLVED?

The quick rundown — two one-semester credit hour classes (ALED 125 fall and ALED 225 spring) will focus on leadership development and peer mentorship. Don’t worry; you can be a part of L3C no matter what you major in. You will:

- Live on campus in Aston Hall
- Attend the ALED classes
- Go to an excellent overnight retreat to get you started and to introduce you to your L3C neighbors
- Be mentored by student leaders
- Go to at least one out-of-town L3C experience
- Complete a social justice and leadership project

THINK OUTSIDE TEXAS A&M UNIVERSITY

L3C will help you lead when you leave Texas A&M University. The program will:

- Challenge you to think globally
- Expose you to theories and concepts of leadership
- Help you develop to your full potential
- Prepare you to teach others how to lead

ARE YOU ELIGIBLE?

To be a part of L3C you’ll need to:

- Be an incoming freshman at Texas A&M University (you must apply to the L3C Program during the spring semester of your senior year in high school)
- Live on campus in Aston Hall within the L3C community
- At your New Student Conference, tell your academic advisor that you need Wednesdays from 3:00 to 3:50 p.m. free so that you can enroll in the L3C leadership course in the fall

“In the L3C program I have had the opportunity to take my education to the next level and have exposed me to diversity. Participating in the international potluck gave me the opportunity to share with Aggies from all over the world — it expanded my view on what an Aggie is.”

Amber Biggy ‘11
Sociology major
Copperas Cove, Texas

“Every day I find myself challenged to expand my perspective of the world and my place in it.”

Oliver Peet Thirman ‘11
Political Science major
Santa Barbara, California

“Every day I find myself challenged to expand my perspective of the world and my place in it.”

Amber Biggy ‘11
Sociology major
Copperas Cove, Texas

“Every day I find myself challenged to expand my perspective of the world and my place in it.”

Oliver Peet Thirman ‘11
Political Science major
Santa Barbara, California