

National Campus Safety Awareness Month

Texas A&M University

Here at Texas A&M University, we too strive toward creating a safe and secure environment where students are able to flourish in the many aspects of college life.

College is undoubtedly a rite of passage for young adults in America. The college experience is filled with new academic challenges, new relationships, new social and physical environments, but also new dangers.

America's college and university campuses are not immune to the staggering realities of the world outside of the campus gates. Crime, sexual violence, alcohol and drug abuse, and hate crimes have now become a part of life on many campuses.

For more information on National Campus Safety Awareness Month, please go to their web site: www.campussafetymonth.org

You will be able to find information about resources, suggested reading, various campus issues, and NCSAM.

The University Police will be hosting property engravings, and participating in a variety of campus events in an effort to promote National Campus Safety Awareness Month.

For upcoming events, please go to the University Police Departments public web site: <http://upd.tamu.edu>
