

The Aggie Eco Reps work independently and with Residence Life to educate residents on sustainable habits and behaviors that they can adopt to make sustainability an Aggie tradition. They have been a recognized student organization since 2013. They have participated in campus-wide events like Texas Recycles Day, the Residence Life Sustainability Challenge, and Earth Day. The AER also provides manpower to educational initiatives with other campus partners. One of these initiatives is their partnership with Chartwells to hold Project Clean Plate each semester. AER members weigh plate scraps from Sbis dining hall over the course of 3 days to educate students on the issue of food waste.

Who are the AERs?

- 🍃 The Aggie Eco Reps are a student organization on campus dedicated to educating their peers on sustainability!
- 🍃 Comprised of 3 committees:
  - Campus Events – design, create, and facilitate events on campus that promote sustainability
  - Education – facilitate educational programs for residence halls and other organizations, create sustainability bulletin boards RAs can request, and more to educate on-campus residents
  - Membership – fundraise, train, record meeting attendance, take meeting notes, brainstorm activities, and plan parties

AER Programs

- 🍃 “Life of a Water Bottle”
  - Do you know what’s going into making that bottle you’re drinking from? They’ll discuss the different phases of the water bottle life cycle and let you repurpose your own!
- 🍃 “Carbon Footprint Investigators”
  - Any idea how big your carbon footprint is? You can even win sustainable prizes by answering questions correctly!
- 🍃 “Enough is Enough!”
  - Ever thought about how much food waste is produced on a college campus? Request this program and learn how to utilize the dining halls so you can reduce your waste.
- 🍃 “Time for a CHANGE”
  - When you think sustainability do you think about your finances? Financial sustainability is something everyone can take time to learn about and what better way to learn than with candy!
